

CALL FOR ABSTRACTS

Our 8th Annual Global Health Conference, Bringing Global Health Home is coming September 28, 2019!

The Global Health Conference is dedicated to raising awareness about pressing global health issues. This will be a forum to discuss and analyze practices and policies that move us towards sustainability and health equity. This one-day conference is an opportunity for researchers, students, and community members involved in global health to network and discuss exciting research, programs, and projects in the field. We hope to inspire participants to work collaboratively toward sustainability in global health, locally and globally.

The conference will be held in the University of Saskatchewan Campus in the Health Sciences Building. This year's topic is focused on empowering students and community members to make an impact in their own communities that will have lasting effects on a global scale. We welcome proposals on any issues related to this theme. Our 2019 conference is a place to share your endeavors in the field of global health with community members and colleagues from different disciplines.

The 2019 Global Health Conference planning committee is in search for proposals involving individual presentations. We also support innovative and creative presentation formats that address conference themes. The conference will also host a poster expo to which students are encouraged to apply.

Abstracts are welcomed from all disciplines and all interests in global health, including research, practice, policy and related areas. We also encourage submissions from individuals and community agencies working outside the university.

Please limit your submission to a maximum of 250 words.

When submitting your abstract, please indicate your preferred method of presentation.

- Presentation
- Workshop
- Interactive Session
